LONGEST SESSION

OF ASSEMBLY

The usual horse play marked the closing session of the House today.

Speaker Banks retired from the chair, shortly before 1 o'clock, the business of the House having practically been completed and on motion of Representative Hayes of Waterbury Representative W. C. Johnson of Newtown was chosen Speaker pro tem. Mr. Johnson declined at first to take the Speaker's place as he looked upon it as a doubtful compliment. However he was assisted to the rostrum by the husky members and the House immediately became uproarious. Paper confettl, books, waste-baskets and other odds and ends were sent flying broadcast in all directions. Johnson however, succeeded in momentarily bringing the House to its senses and after a few serious remarks he received an ovation. Then followed the customary "joke" resolutions of a personal nature which mark the closing day's doings. Representative F. C. Clark of Bridgeport arose to address the shair but his voice was drowned in the jeers and shouts and before he could escape he was bombarded from all directions. Other members who had the hardihood to arise were treated similarly and this continued for 20 minutes. The House then recessed until 2 o'clock when they will be ready to meet the Senate in joint assembly for final adjournment. The House in concurrence with the Senate indefinitely postponed the resolution allowing $500 extra for each of the House clerks, clerk of the bills and clerk of the engrossed bills.

The House concurred with the Senate in passing the bills incorporating St. Jonn's Industrial School of Deep River. This is the institution concerning which Governor Weeks sent in a veto last week.

In concurrence with the Senate the House killed two measures relating to garbage, one concerning the report of foul matters in Long Island Sound and the other referred to the transportation of garbage. Also in concourrence with the Senate, the House rejected the bill relating to the taxation of lands taken by municipalities. It concurred with the Senate in a (Continued from First' Page.)

The record of the House from the popular standpoint was the best that any House has made in years. The members, or a majority of them, for the most part refused to be subject to corporate control. Only once, in the case of the public utilities bill, did the lower branch fail to be responsive to the public will, and then only by three or four votes.

The Senate, however, sang to a song of another tune. Not only did the Senate defeat the public utilities bill, but it also prevented the repeal of the $5.000 limit in actions of text to recover for death. It prevented the passage of the employers' liability act and in nearly every instance was found arrayed in favor of measures desired by the great public service corporations.

New York, Aug. 24.—The steamnship Kaiser Withelm II arrived at Quarantine at 2:05 p. m. E. H. Harriman was on board. He declared to the army of newspaper men who boarded the vessel that he was "feeling pretty good," but that he would make no statement until he boarded his own private car in Jersey City.

There was some delay in getting the liner through Quarantine for the physicians there insisted on making a close examination into the circumstances surrounding the death of two steerage passengers during the voyage. When the health officers boarded the ship Harriman was found in his stateroom, the Imperial Suite 1, on the upper deck forward, on the port side. He was seated at lunch, resting his head and shoulders against a pillow at his head and shoulders against a pillow at his head and shoulders against a pillow at his head and thin, he spoke in a good strong voice.

In refusing to talk he said: "I promised not to talk until I meet the newspaper men on the train going out to Arden and I think I had better kreep my word, don' tyou?"

When asked about his health Mr. Harriman merely said: "I'm pretty well, I'm better."

He said that he intended remaining on the liner until he made her dock at Hoboken and that he would, therefore, not transfer to the Southern Pecific that was awaiting him at Quarantine. He asked how the weather was ashore and when told that it was hot he said he had dressed for it.

Clavis protested against this decision and his protest being unavailing, he went to Washington to urge his proof of fraud. Arriving at Washington he found that the claims had been sent back to be patented without hearing. Clavis then secured the submission of all the papers in the case to Attorney General Wickersham and Wickersham ruled that at least a hearing must be held and Clavis returned to Seattle to prepare his case for an immediate hearing. An order kas given to Clavis by the land office to the effect that the hearing would not be held at Juena, but that "under special arrangements with the claimants, the Commissioner of the General Land Office would make the decision direct from the basis of evidence taken by a special representative."

Clavis then made a final protest against the hearing being held before the government could finish the collection of evidence and he wrote and wired to the law offices of the Forestry Service, setting forth that the forestry people had it within their power to avoid the past action.

Upon the representations of Shaw, Secretary Wilson wrote to Secretary Ballinger requesting a postponement and Shaw went at once to the Interior Department and asked to see all the files bearing on these cases. He was refused access to the papers and this is said to be the first time in the history of the Forestry Service that another government official was denied this privilege.

Last Friday Glavis appeared here at Beverly to lay his troubles before President Taft. Glavis' representations have now been referred to Attorney General Wickersham a second time and are in his hands. At the same time a statement was given out at Denyer setting October 15 for a hearing at Seattle of the so-called Alaska coal cases and on the same day Acting Commissioner of the Land Office Schwarts gave out a statement from Washington showing the activity of the interior department in prosecuting frauds and in withdrawing the entire public lands of especial value.
